Historic Charleston and Georgetown, SC

May 1 - 3, 2012

$395 Double / $495 Single

Any journey into the soul of the Old South must begin in Charleston, with its nagging familiarity, that sense of déjà vu which comes from history books, or Dubose Heyward's lyrical descriptions of Catfish Row in his best selling novel, Porgy, or even the starring roles the city played in Gone with the Wind, or The Patriot. Join us for a three-day get-a-way to discover Charleston's history and experience quaint Georgetown. You'll begin with a visit to the Charleston Museum, founded in 1773 while SC was yet a British Colony, followed by a visit to the Heyward-Washington House, "Charleston's Revolutionary War House". This was the townhome of Thomas Heyward, Jr., revolutionary patriot and signer of the Declaration of Independence. You will walk through the exquisite formal garden comprised of plants available to Charlestonians during the period. (Continued on Page 13)
